LANGTON MINIATURES

Dockside & Buildings Series, Scale 1:1200

The series is based on the harbour and city of Toulon, France, 1793 and complements our Napoleonic Naval range. It was launched in 1993, the 200th anniversary of the siege, with the building of an 8ft x 4ft diorama to commemorate the event.

The harbour of Toulon was the greatest naval port on France's southern coast and in consequence, the base for her Mediterranean fleet. Both the city and harbour were protected by vast walls that had been redesigned and strengthened by Louis XIV's great military engineer, Vauban.

The siege of Toulon is of historic importance, having had the potential of changing the course of history and averting 25 years of what became known as the Napoleonic Wars. Napoleon Bonaparte himself, at the time an artillery officer, played a key role in military tactics employed there.

The diorama was constructed after extensive research and on the basis of plans and documented information. Many of the civic and dockside buildings were modelled using plans and façades of buildings in Toulon in 1793.

While the focus for the diorama was on authenticity, the series was aimed at a range of items versatile enough to construct any size harbour setting - to suit modellers and wargamers. Large areas were therefore done in sections and designed to allow extensions.

To complete the range we also produced buildings which are generic in design and suitable for both inland and coastal settings of the 18th/19th century.
